

Holiday Toy Express® Brings Sunshine to Kids with Cancer

On Friday, November 20, Metrolink's Holiday Toy Express® had its sparkling dress rehearsal before embarking on the annual tour of communities throughout Southern California. On that unique night, Santa and friends were joined by special guests from the Sunshine Kids Foundation™. Twenty-six children and their families from the local nonprofit—which is dedicated to providing free, fun group activities to kids with cancer—enjoyed a sneak preview of the dazzling and festive Holiday Toy Express. Their smiles shone brightly, even amid the 450-ton train's 50,000 holiday-themed lights and decorations.

Metrolink invited the Sunshine Kids to participate in Preview Night of our 2009 Holiday Toy Express in an effort to brighten the lives of kids with cancer and share in the holiday spirit. The kids were brimming with excitement when they arrived at L.A. Union Station. And their excitement only grew when the holiday-themed train pulled up. They climbed onboard and rode the rails for 45 minutes to Covina, enjoying dinner and games on the train. They took commemorative photos and met Santa and all of the other Holiday Toy Express characters. Plus, each child received a gift bag containing prizes including a four-trip ticket for a future ride on Metrolink.

The fun continued upon arrival at the Covina Station, where the Sunshine Kids were among the first to see the spectacular 2009 edition of the Holiday Toy Express musical production.

Each year Metrolink chooses one nonprofit organization committed to children to participate in the Holiday Toy Express dress rehearsal before the train sets out on its 47-city tour to spread holiday joy and collect toys for the "Spark of Love" Toy Drive. Local firefighters last year collected over 600,000 toys throughout Southern California to gift to underprivileged children during the holidays.

This opportunity to enhance the lives of kids with cancer came at a time when families with children fighting cancer face even more economic hardships than most. Parents are often forced to quit their jobs because they are constantly in and out of hospitals with their children. Living situations become compromised, as one household salary cannot sustain the lifestyles of families accustomed to the salaries of two working parents. Families depend on complimentary and exciting activities to bring normalcy to their kids' lives, especially during the holidays.

"We received an onslaught of calls from kids who wanted to enjoy the Holiday Toy Express," said Brooks Tomb, director of the Sunshine Kids' western region. "We hold two to three out-of-hospital events each month and our needs seem to be greater around the holidays," added Tomb. "This particular event—with a special chance to allow kids to be VIPs and ride the train—is a real testament to the need to continue providing such great opportunities."

When the Sunshine Kids boarded buses to return home at the end of their train ride, we were heartened to have been part of making at least one evening brighter in their daily struggle with cancer.

The Sunshine Kids Foundation was established in 1982 to enhance the quality of life of children with cancer so that they may once again do what kids are supposed to do: have fun and celebrate life! For more information about the Sunshine Kids Foundation, visit their Web site at sunshinekids.org.

SAFETY ONE

Be safe: Don't walk around lowered gates.

SAFETY BEGINS WITH YOU

Law-Enforcement Officials Work to Heighten Safety Awareness in Orange County

On Wednesday, November 4, in an effort to increase awareness about the importance of rail safety, the Southern California Rail Safety Team worked with numerous Southern California law-enforcement agencies and regulators on an "Officer on a Train" event in Orange County.

The "Officer on a Train" program gives officials both a close-up look at the types of dangerous and illegal behavior that locomotive engineers see on a daily basis, and numerous opportunities to cite those who violate safety regulations. In a mere four hours, they observed an alarming 395 violations—up from 294 in the same territory last year. This year 212 vehicular citations and 37 pedestrian citations were issued, 19 vehicles were towed, and six arrests were made. The officers also noted 121 visual violations, or "getaways"—that is, people who broke safety laws, but escaped without being cited.

The event began at 6:00 a.m. with a briefing at Anaheim's Angel Stadium, where more than 70 officers from the Union Pacific Railroad Police Department, Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railway Police, Los Angeles County Sheriff, Orange County Sheriff, and 24 local law-enforcement agencies from throughout Los Angeles and Orange counties were given location assignments.

Drivers and pedestrians received citations for rail-related code violations such as trespassing, failing to stop at railroad-crossing signals, and driving around lowered railroad-crossing gates.

"Officer on a Train" events are a form of directed enforcement, which is meant to supplement regular law-enforcement activity on the rails. In directed enforcement, police or sheriff's officers stationed at railroad crossings and along the right-of-way wait for trains to activate advance-warning devices and gates. Then they watch—for the motorist racing under dropping gates, for the pedestrian ducking beneath them, for the bicyclist who pedals through. Citations are issued for violations. Directed-enforcement efforts occur several times each year throughout the Metrolink system.

Regular officer and community attention to the tracks is essential every day of the year. The training is intended to increase awareness and hone response skills. In August, when two toddlers wandered onto Metrolink tracks, it was the eyes of the community and the skills of local police officers that saved their lives. The toddlers crawled through a broken gate at their day-care center and wandered onto the tracks. Fortunately, community members saw them and called the police, who were able to quickly get the kids off the tracks unharmed.

Events like "Officer on a Train" exist not only to enforce laws but also to educate community members about safe behaviors on and near railroad tracks and rights-of-way. The core message is simple: stay off, stay away, and stay alive!

Go, Clipper Nation!

The 2009–10 season promises to be very exciting this year! The addition of Blake Griffin—the number-one draft choice—to an already exciting core of young players including potential All-Stars Eric Gordon, Al Thornton, and DeAndre Jordan creates a strong foundation for an exciting future for the Clippers. Mix that young group with established veterans like Baron Davis and Marcus Camby, and the Clippers are undoubtedly contenders for a play-off berth in the ever-competitive Western Conference.

Metrolink riders can get a 50 percent discount on tickets for the following 13 home games. Just go to ticketmaster.com/promo/p3mvtz to order your tickets online; use the special promo code "METRO."
